

Easy-to-read Metro user guide

Arrival at your destination

When the train arrives at your destination station, you'll find green signs on the platforms indicating your destination:

- The exit.
- The nearest streets.
- Direction arrows when there is more than one exit.
- Arrows indicating that you can take the lift out.

- On the platform, you have signs showing you how to get to the platform of another line, when several lines cross at the station and you need to transfer.

In the corridors, there are also green signs indicating "Exit" and the nearest street(s).

At stations in zone A, you'll arrive at a different exit barrier to the turnstile.

You can exit without swiping your card.

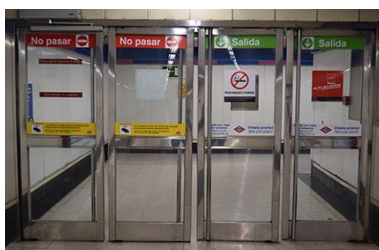

You need to go through the exits indicated by a green arrow.

You may not go through the turnstiles with a red flag.

At other stations, you need to swipe your card again like at the entrance.

- Finally, before you reach the street you'll find the glass gates. Exit through the gates marked with a green "Exit" sign.
- One of the access gates will be marked as an accessible gate with an opening button.

- Press to open the gate.
- You can see it with a green sign.